Darel Scott, MS

FOUNDER
EARTH IN COLOR

Darel Scott explores the nexus of culture, design, and environmental sustainability. She is the founder of Earth in Color, an organization that designs nature gatherings and zines that help people rediscover their cultural connections to the natural world and sustainability. This work focuses on the histories and lived experiences of black people and other people of color.

Darel is working towards a future where we have healed our relationship with nature and live in ways that sustain a healthy planet. In January, she received her masters from Stanford University in sustainability science and practice and in 2017, she received her bachelors, also from Stanford, in earth systems.
